FUN AND ENTERTAINMENT

When was the last time you traveled? Did you have a good time?

Most people love traveling because it often means visiting somewhere that is unfamiliar to you, or somewhere different from where you live. For some, traveling is a hobby, while for others it's part of a job.

One of the best things about traveling is experiencing new cultures.

Of course, what may be culturally acceptable in one country may be offensive in another. Gestures, in particular, have multiple meanings throughout the world.

Here are some of the interesting examples of proper cultural etiquette:

- The North American “OK” sign made by curling the thumb and forefinger together is an obscene gesture in Turkey, Brazil and Germany, and can be seen as a threatening gesture in parts of the Middle East.
- In European countries, when counting on one's hand, the thumb is 1, index finger 2, etc. In the United States, the index finger is 1, middle finger is 2, etc. and the thumb usually means 5.
- It's perfectly normal (and expected) for passengers to ride in the front seat of taxis in Australia
- Adding salt and pepper to your food is considered highly offensive to chefs in Switzerland
- In parts of Tibet, sticking one's tongue out at someone is a greeting.

a Tibetan showing respect

In Albania, nodding one's head stands for 'no', while shaking one's head means 'yes'.
Confusing to say the least!
